

Chad N. Himmel, P.E.
Associate

Résumé

Professional Services: Chad Himmel, P.E., is responsible for JEA project management and scheduling. He conducts and supervises measurements, analyses, engineering design, detailing, and recommendations for architectural acoustics and sound isolation, mechanical noise control, structural vibration, and environmental noise. Chad's background includes work and degrees in architecture and engineering, leading to excellent integration of building acoustics and vibration disciplines with building design and construction. He has been a presenting speaker at the University of Texas School of Engineering, AIA and TSA national conventions, and local professional groups, and has presented technical papers at international conferences in America, Australia and Europe.

Experience: Mr. Himmel has worked in engineering and building design since 1989. He has consulted on projects in the Americas, Asia, Europe, and Africa. His experience includes acoustics, noise and vibration control, architectural and structural design, construction management, and computer programming.

Prior to joining JEACOUSTICS, Mr. Himmel worked as an Acoustical Consultant with Michael R. Yantis Associates in Seattle, Washington, beginning in 1996. In this capacity he consulted on various architectural, industrial, and environmental projects.

After completing a Bachelor of Science Degree in Architectural Engineering and a Bachelors Degree in Architecture in 1992, Chad worked for Germanio Engineering in Austin, designing and detailing building additions, renovations, and foundations. He has also worked as an independent consultant in building design and structural design in Austin and as a computer programmer in Seattle.
